

JEREMIAH J. FOLEY

ASSOCIATE / DETROIT METRO OFFICE

Jeremiah devotes his time and energy to protecting his clients' array of intellectual property rights. He uses his mechanical engineering background and previous work experience to provide efficient counseling that protects innovative ideas and hard-earned competitive advantages. His practice includes working with clients in the software, automotive, manufacturing, and mechanical industries.

Jeremiah previously worked as a mechanical engineer in New York City where he managed skyscraper construction projects. These projects often involved green building and HVAC systems that further required Jeremiah to conduct mechanical and energy code inspections. He then gained manufacturing and R&D experience working in the medical device field for a world-leading orthopedic company. Having graduated in the top five of his class at law school, he now applies this experience and high level of performance to protecting his clients' rights.
